

XM is the best thing to happen to radio in a long time. If the am/fm broadcasters want to compete, then they need to provide the same quality of programming that is offered on XM. I pay for this service so I don't have to listen to the constant advertising on regular radio. The TV networks have survived the pay-tv industry, the radio folks can do it to.